Hundreds of Small Craft Will

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The drone of motors of a great air armada, music to every navigator, will herald the nation's joyous home-coming for Charles A. Lindbergh today.

While the sleek cruiser Memphis was speeding in a smooth sea with the youthful hero of the New York to Paris flight, the welcoming vanguard composed of the dirigible Los Angeles, a dozen airplanes and six destroyers, planned to set out to meet her off the Virginia Capes.

Vice-Admiral Burrage wireless the Navy Department that Lindbergh scanning the horizon from the bridge of the Memphis, would sight land early in the afternoon.

Before sundown he will be well within the waters of Chesapeake Bay with hundreds of small craft joining in the welcome that will precede official reception by President Coolidge in behalf of the nation on Saturday.

From the Los Angeles the spick and span uniform of the colonel in the Missouri National Guard will be dropped aboard the Memphis from the Los Angeles, while the first actual contact will be established when Richard E. Byrd, a St. Louis friend, leaves a destroyer to join "Lindy" aboard the cruiser.

Well within her schedule, the Memphis will steam up the historic Potomac at a leisurely pace tonight and deliver Col. Lindbergh at the presidential dock in Washington Navy Yard at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. While he is whisked off for a parade and the presentation of the distinguished flying cross by President Coolidge, a dozen skilled mechanics will begin to reassemble the sturdy plane which carried him across the ocean and which, on Monday, will carry him to New York for a new demonstration of the nation's enthusiasm.

Meanwhile a holiday atmosphere enveloped the national capital. American flags, and occasionally the tricolor of France, Lindbergh pictures, Lindbergh canes and Lindbergh hats all testified to the gala spirit that presages a welcome never exceeded here.

Nor was Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of the intrepid young aviator, forgotten. Her pictures were conspicuously displayed in hundreds of store windows.

Reception committees were enmeshed in a maze of details and hurried by thousands demanding the dues of official position and seeking preferred seats for the ceremonies which will be conducted within the shadow of Washington Monument tomorrow afternoon.

Spencer & Sons' Store To Take Part in Big Sale

Spencer & Sons' furniture store at Mill and Radcliffe streets, will swing open their doors on Monday as part of a unit of 517 furniture firms that will do likewise in the nation-wide Berkey and Gay One-Week Sale of the famous Avon Furniture.

The Avon dining-room suite to be displayed in Spencer's window is new, yet reminiscent of Jacobean England. Examine the artfully hand-matched woods, the hand carved panels, and see how well this furniture is constructed. Spencer & Sons are the exclusive Bristol agents for this line.

As One of Our Old-Timers Sees the Hunting Game

This is one of a series of articles written in the interest of the Bristol Fish and Game Protective Association. One article appears each Friday.

By "Ole Joe"

Well, folks, I've been huntin' and fishin' in these parts for nigh onto fifty years and I'd like to tell you a few things just as I see them. I ain't much on English, but I know what I'm talkin' about just the same. I hear some of these young folks who travel around in knickers and tote a slick gun on their shoulder and a pair of wire cutters in their back pocket, talk about how scarce game is. Why, they're crazy! Game ain't no scarcer now than it was fifty years ago, exceptin' there's a mite more of these fangdangled hunters a-spreadin' 'em shot around here and there. They don't seem to think how many just like themself go out with these new shootin' irons which can pump lead all over a ten acre field.

I always use me old single barrel hammer gun. By George, I've had her fer twenty-five years now and I wouldn't swap her fer all these new fangled machine-like guns ever made. I can still go out and get me rabbit or two and I can get meself a few pheasants in a season. By gum, them there pheasants is the birds. I never even seen one in these parts until a dozen years or so ago. Now, they's so many of 'em I don't see how they get out of each other's way. These birds were first put out by the game association and I'm mighty dern proud that I belong to it. If some of these people would stop growlin' and jine the game association maybe we could arrange to tie a few more rabbits to a bush so they could shoot 'em.

It makes me laugh when I hear this high-brow agericulturalist (if that be the way she's spelled) idea floatin' around about the pheasant eatin' up so many beetles; and that the birds shouldn't be shot, accordin' to this stand-pint. Sure, they do gobble up a few beetles in the summer fer dessert, but in the winter there are none, and besides this, we only shoot the cock bird, so look at all the hen birds left to eat beetles. It ain't the beetle eatin' proposition that makes the farmer run you off'n his land, it's these fellers what don't know the difference between a pheasant and a farmer's chicken or pigeons an' what don't only know how to tear down a fence instead of crawlin' thru. Boys, the farmer's our big friend, and if we treat him fair he's gonna do the same fer us. Lots of farmers take out feed for the poor pheasants in the winter when the snow is deep; he helps to see our birds (and his birds, too) thru the winter.

Then, too, there are some town fellers that take feed out in the winter for the birds, such as George and Howard and some of the other fellers. They like to shoot the sportin' cock bird when the time comes, but also they like to protect him at other times. If all us hunters could get together and jine this here Game Association and do our part we could make our old gas pipes roar and growl hot from shootin' the sporty birds when the frosty season comes.

I've seen years and years of huntin' go by, but the best I've seen is since this Game Association of ours has been a boostin' things along by usin' the money they get to buy pheasants and rabbits each year to keep our breedin' stock from runnin' short. Boys, I know some of you says the association does no good, just like I used to say before I jined it, but I'm tellin' you what: You had better jine and help us out.

As fer fishin' that's a different story. It makes me sigh when I think of all the beautiful water we used to have. Why, when I was young I used to sit under the trees along the Delaware and watch sturgeon jump. We used to catch lots of 'em. An' shad, they were plentiful. We lived on them while the run was on. But it ain't because we ate them all that they are not here now. By gosh, they's plenty of 'em, but they're scared to come up the river and try to swim thru all the pollution—er what she's a 'tendin' to do. Gonna dam up the Delaware a hundred miles upstream to get some fresh water, because she gets her part nearly too dirty.

I don't know what's a comin' over us these days fer places to fish. Guess we'll have to try enlistin' a lot more members in our Association and make a drive fer cleaner streams and more fish to stock up with and the such as that—do it something like we did to make pheasants get a good start here.

Well, boys, days are growin' short fer me since I've already spent so many and I'm happy to go along just as long as I kin. I like ter do my part in this huntin' game and if I've stepped on any feller's toe fer not doin' his bit I hope he don't condemn me too severe-like.

Bristol Nine To Face Strong Bridesburg Team

The Bristol baseball nine are called on to show their stuff when they face the Bridesburg team of Philadelphia on Sullivan's Field Sunday afternoon.

The Philadelphians come here with an aggregation of players that are the class of the twilight league in Philadelphia, having such stars as Volitz, Johnson and Barth ready to do mound duty and Longacker and Perry, two of the heaviest hitters in the league in the outfield.

Managers Flum and Dougherty are determined that Bristol will have a team that the supporters will like and keep up the sports prestige of the town, so have signed Lefty Hulmes, who has pitched for a number of leading clubs. He was the main stay on the Hazleton team of the anthracite league last season. He started on the mound for the Tulpehocken Reds against Bristol last Sunday, but didn't have much of an opportunity to show his stuff because the game came to an abrupt end when a rain storm spoiled the afternoon so far as baseball was concerned. The other positions on the Bristol team will be occupied by Dietrich catching, Brown first base, Roe second, Cook shortstop, Arentz third base, with Custer, Riola and another outfielder.

Local Ball Nine Will Open Island Diamond

"Freddy" Lyden's Independent baseball team will open the new Burlington Island diamond on Sunday afternoon, when they play the Beverly Browns in a return game.

Manager Lyden has strengthened his team considerably, having signed Edgar Smith, of Lafayette, to do the hurling, and three players from the Burlington County League.

The Browns are out for revenge, the defeat by the Independents last Wednesday evening on St. Ann's field having just about finished their manager, who has booked a number of colored stars to play for his team on Sunday.

The park management has put the playing field in wonderful shape, with arrangements made to handle a large crowd.

BERLIN OPENS ARMS TO TWO U. S. FLIERS

Offers Honorary Citizenship
To Chamberlin And Levine

By O. D. Tolischus
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, June 10.—The municipality of Berlin opened its arms to the American fliers, Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, today, and offered the two honorary citizenship.

Berlin is not unmindful of the honor extended Dr. Eckener when he arrived in New York, having flown the dirigible Los Angeles across the ocean, and today's ceremonies were partially as a return of this compliment, but chiefly an enthusiastic effort to demonstrate just how greatly Berlin admires these pioneers of the air.

The enthusiasm for the two fliers does not seem to recede, and Berlin which is naturally an unemotional city has been marked with continued displays and demonstrations that have not been equalled since the war days.

So great is the enthusiasm for the flying men that Berlin refuses to permit them to even change their clothes, and everywhere they go it is insisted that they appear in the flying togs which they wore across the Atlantic. This despite the fact that both men have consulted tailors and are now quite prepared to appear properly dressed for all occasions.

In addition to the thousands of words of spoken and written praise, both Chamberlin and Levine are burdened down with material indications of Germany's admiration for them, for it seems that almost everyone in Germany has sent some gift to the American Embassy for the two fliers.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS OF COUNTY MEET AT COUNTY SEAT

Favor Use of Local History
Text Books in The Schools

DR. DRIVER IS SPEAKER

Tells Rural Directors Great Advantages Found In Consolidation

DOYLESTOWN, June 10.—Very little doubt remains that in the very near future the pupils of the Bucks County schools will be afforded an opportunity to study Bucks County history from a text book which is to be published solely for that purpose. This was brought out at the annual meeting of the Bucks County School Directors' Association held in the court house Wednesday.

Some months ago a committee was appointed to look after the publication of a book from manuscript prepared by a prominent local historian, Warren S. Ely, Doylestown.

Dr. Carmon Ross, supervising principal of the Doylestown schools, reported at the meeting that a publishing company is willing to publish a book on local history providing the county guarantees to purchase 2000 books the first year.

After a somewhat lengthy discussion it was decided to have the county superintendent get in touch with the 22 districts of the county with the view of learning how many books each township would purchase. It was said that if each district were to purchase 25 books, the purchase of 2000 could be guaranteed. It was brought out that some of the districts will need as high as 75 books. When it has been ascertained that the guarantee has been effected, the committee will be able to take steps for the publication of the book.

The principal speaker of the day was Dr. Lee S. Driver, of the Department of Public Instruction, Harrisburg, who spoke on "Consolidation of Schools." The speaker said that when he became a county superintendent of schools 20 years ago there was no person more opposed to the movement. He believes now that 99 out of every 100 persons who learn the advantages of consolidation will be converted to the project.

The problem in the rural districts, said Dr. Driver, is more acute than in the cities and large towns, because of the meagre training which is given to the children in the rural districts, where supervision is lacking, where teachers perform their duties according to their own ideas, and where new teachers are continually being broken into the teaching profession. The rural schools are the least improved in the way of equipment. The matter of procuring teachers does not amount to much, but the problem of keeping the worthwhile teachers is one that is very acute. When once a teacher has become successful, the larger town schools or the city schools employ her and the rural district is left to break in another teacher only to have her leave when her success is assured.

With consolidation, continued the speaker, the teachers can be kept in the district and the districts can even go to the larger town schools and the city schools and often get those teachers to come out into the country to teach in the consolidated schools.

Dr. Driver spoke briefly of the advantages of the consolidated schools from the standpoint of instruction. It is generally recognized, said Dr. Driver, that the graded school has superior advantages over the ungraded schools, where the teachers are almost compelled to teach all of the subjects to children ranging from 5 years to 12 and 13 years of age. In many instances the teachers are unable to adapt themselves to the children of the various ages or to some of the subjects. With consolidation the speaker said that one teacher may be able to teach mathematics, while on the other hand she may be a complete failure in teaching some other subject. With consolidation the teachers will be given an opportunity of teaching the branches and the pupils to which she is best adapted.

Dr. Driver also spoke of the many courses which the pupils of the consolidated schools can take, while in the ungraded school, because of the limited time, they can not be given. Boys of the country school, he said, should be given the same opportunities as those in the cities. Too many people think the city boys and girls are entitled to their fine buildings and the best of teachers and at the same time too many in the rural districts are satisfied with these old, one-cylinder institutions.

Statisticians have shown that a larger number of boys in the country have left the high schools after their first year than boys in the towns. The failures in the rural districts were found to be one-third higher than in the town and city schools. Boys in the graded schools excelled in all lines the boys in the ungraded schools. On the other hand, it was found that the boys coming from the rural districts into the town schools excelled the boys in the towns.

Dr. Driver said there was only one

"What Happened To Jones" Given Before Large Crowd

A large audience enjoyed the play given by the America Hose, Hook & Ladder Co. No. 2, last evening. Each character played his part well.

The merit of the play lay in the witty sayings of Jones, the travelling salesman, whose ready wit got him out of many intricate situations.

The acoustical conditions made it impossible for some in the rear of the building to hear all of the parts. Those more fortunately situated caught the theme of the involved plots and enjoyed them thoroughly.

The farce-comedy type of play, that of ridiculous situations and satirical and humorous compositions was well portrayed in "What Happened to Jones." The company expressed its thanks and appreciation to the public for their kind patronage.

THE PRESIDENT'S VACATION

Selection of the Black Hills of South Dakota for the vacation camp of President Coolidge and his family revives discussion of the feasibility and advisability of a permanent "summer white house." And after the pros and cons of the subject have been argued all over again a permanent summer home for the president will be no nearer a reality.

Presumably the purpose of a "summer white house" is to afford a president opportunity for rest and recreation. But not all men can get rest and recreation out of the same things and places. To compel a chief executive to spend his vacation in a given place would be as unreasonable as making the private citizen spend his vacation and holidays in the same place every year.

But aside from its inconsistency the proposal is filled with a dozen varieties of dynamite. Congress had to create the District of Columbia and city of Washington to still the rival claims of the states and cities for the nation's capital and congress has no intention of reawakening this sectional jealousy and rivalry.

And would not a permanent location encourage the development there of a diplomatic colony that in time would fill the president's vacation with very much the same kind of activity, from which he seeks to escape when he closes the white house at Washington for the summer?

And what assurance would there be that every president or any president would spend his vacation at a place designated by congress? In this respect all presidents have been most nomadic and congress has been notoriously unsuccessful in legislating away traditions and customs.

WHAT MAKES PROSPERITY

Prosperity means good business, and good business means active buying. Buying moves in a circle.

There are four factors in the circle of buying—the manufacturer, the jobber, the retailer and the buyer. Together these factors constitute the public. The manufacturer, the jobber or retailer is in a separate class from the buyer only so far as his business is concerned. In every other relation in life he is one small individual in the great mass called the public, and he is affected by the same living conditions that affect the latter. Outside his own business he, too, is a buyer, so he joins with the public in starting the buying impulse that sweeps around the circle. He buys the comforts and necessities of life, and he wants reasonable prices the same as the public does.

Not all Bristol merchants are using the local newspapers to unload their shelves. But it can be depended upon that the ones who are, are the ones who are anxious to join hands with the public in bringing about prosperity and keeping the community prosperous.

The hardest thing friendship has to bear is the sight of a buddy being a good fellow with money he owes you.

To each three thousand of population there are four boarding-house keepers whose husbands like to sit and argue.

If you're a somebody, you can get by without fine clothes; if you are a nobody, the finest of clothes won't change your status.

"MATINEE LADIES," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picture-ization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, college student, gets work as a dancing partner for rich women in a New Jersey roadhouse. There he meets the prettiest, sweetest girl he has ever laid eyes on. Reciprocating his interest, she warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitué of the Inn, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob for her loveliest apartment. Mrs. Smith, meeting Bob, is hostile; favoring Mannon, a rich suitor. Next day when Bob neglects Mrs. Hammond for Sally, they are rebuffed.

Both Sally and Bob flushed at Madame Leonine's rebuke. Hot rejoinders rose to Bob's lips, which Sally, anticipating by some premonition, forestalled by laying a restraining hand on him—a cool, flowerlike hand on a white stem of an arm.

Sally then hurried out to her vending; and Bob, after making ready, followed her, and went directly up to Mrs. Hammond, who was masking impatience and resentment under her inscrutable smile.

His physical attention to her during the dance left nothing to be desired; and his spirits had all the charm that, together with his handsomeness, had first captured Mrs. Hammond's attention. She was, in part, mollified, assuring herself that after all it would not be so much of a thrill for her, in her new role of hunter, if this good-looking and clean youth were to fall for her at once. That was what all the other men she had ever met had done. It was because Bob had at last introduced something different into her experience of, and with, males, that she had been so thrilled.

Now her pride was touched. Her reputation, in her own estimation, as one who could get any man, and that man quickly, was at stake. It was to be her brains, her wiles, pitted against Sally Smith's youth and innocence, with all the natural aids and alliances on Sally's side.

Mrs. Hammond grimly accepted the gauntlet, embraced the issue!

Wise in the ways of young men's emotions, she made no further verbal attempts to interest Bob. Instead, she confined herself strictly to making an alluring physical companion for him—in the dance, and at the table. She was coy and clever, revivifying and demure, seducing and reticent, in turn and in varying degrees, until poor Bob's green head fairly spun with the wonder of her feminine charms.

When she talked, it was on things that lay dear to his heart. A smart and understanding comment on engineering; some anecdote of famous engineering personalities; an offhand and affable remark, in the manner of an intimate friend, about John Hays Hammond or an equally celebrated engineer; and, very cautiously, some adulatory observations about Sally Smith, in which she pretended the most gracious and benign interest.

Always, unconsciously, Bob found that the allusion to Sally would leave a rather hollow comparison in his inner mind of Sally as against Mrs. Hammond. What Bob did not appreciate was that this was a deliberate bit of wile on Mrs. Hammond's part!

Sally seemed such an undeveloped creature beside the erudite Mrs. Hammond, whenever Bob thought of, or watched them, together.

"I'm not being disloyal to Sally," he told himself anxiously, "but Della Hammond is a decidedly worthwhile woman to know. I ought to be glad of her friendship. I can learn a lot from her. I must not be silly and sacrifice her nice, friendly interest in me just to humor a lot of idle, no doubt vicious, gossip on the part of Mame, and such fat-

Everybody knows if their color glands and hair roots are active and normal they will continue indefinitely to have rich, natural colored hair entirely free of gray and off-colored locks.

A doctor several years ago asked himself this question: "Why not rub a stimulating tonic into the scalp that will revive, strengthen and tone up those inactive glands so that nature in her own inimitable way will resume putting plenty of pigment into the hair tubes—surely the hair will then again resume its original, natural, beautiful shades of youth regardless of the user's age or the condition of their hair."

Users have been amazed at the younger appearance that comes with the disappearance of gray hairs from their head. REMARKABLE DISCOVERY
The doctor's search for a tonic that would accomplish this purpose led him into endless experiments, but the final result was worth it. He didn't want a dye or tint and it of course must be harmless and something that could be used for years and years without the slightest injury to hair or scalp.

Under the name of Lea's Hair Tonic anyone may now purchase the tonic he finally perfected. For several years now hairdressers and people scattered all over the country have been using it. Results are so natural, gradual and nice that men as well as women use it.

Observations About Events, Persons and Things Which Are of General Interest. : : :

One splash!

And what was a moment before a clear pool or still edge of a glimmering stream, is a series of tiny ripples and bubbles. The youngster has answered the call of summer.

Bristol parents should be doubly thankful for the means afforded the young folks for swimming purposes. Many a town in the United States has not the facilities with which to furnish the sport of swimming, that beloved form of amusement that seems to call to each of us as we reach a certain young age.

Just now the canal, river, the basin, Bender Creek, the Neshaminy, and every little pool that boasts of even a small amount of water is giving delight and relief to scores of the younger element, and many older in years.

Blessed indeed, is that individual who is skilled in the art of swimming or floating, as those who do not participate miss a great deal in this life.

Occasionally a fond mother is heard to voice such an expression as "I don't want Mary, or Johnny, to go in the water. If they form the habit, I'll never know when they are safe." But America, one of the foremost of nations in water-sports, has taken a different attitude. It is the general consensus of opinion that if young America has a fear of the water, and has had the desire to learn to swim killed by warnings from older folks, when a crucial moment comes at a time of catastrophe, the chances for safety are small.

Teach swimming and help abolish that fear of the water, and many probable canoe or boat accident fatalities will be averted.

And above all, give young America, which most certainly includes the young boys and girls of this section, a change to enjoy to the fullest one of the finest of pastimes.

Many of the larger schools and colleges throughout the land, which have indoor bathing facilities, have made it a rule that diplomas will not be awarded to students, regardless of what their scholastic attainments may be, until said scholars are able to prove their prowess of the water by staying "above-board" for a specified distance.

Those men and women at the heads of these institutions have at heart the welfare of the nation.

Cooking Chat with 6 Famous Cooks

(Courtesy of the Domestic Science Department, Perfection Stove Company)

WELCOME CHANGES FOR THE BREAKFAST MENU

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of cooking articles by six of the country's best-known cooks.)

Bacon, eggs, toast, cereal. Mighty good for breakfast, but don't we sometimes get tired of them?

Hot breads are always welcome, and they don't take very long to prepare. And waffles make a big hit, although they require a little more work on the part of the cook. However, it's worth it, when we see the look of pure joy on the faces of the youngsters while they eat.

Berry Muffins
Blueberries, huckleberries, raspberries—any berries in season—are delicious in muffins. Miss Margaret Allen, nutrition specialist at the Battle Creek College of Home Economics, gives her favorite muffin recipe.

1 cup fresh berries
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup sifted flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
Sift the dry ingredients together. Cream the butter and sugar. Add the milk and the dry ingredients alternately. At the last, fold in the berries.
Always flour berries before putting them into the batter. This keeps them from going to the bottom.

It's always best to have a hot oven for muffins and biscuits. If you cook with a modern long-chambered oven, turn the flame until yellow tips appear, about 1 1/2 inches high above the blue area. This flame pre-heats quickly.

Golden Corn Muffins
Corn muffins, crisp and golden crusted, are delicious. This is how Miss Hall makes them.
1/2 cup cornmeal
1 1/4 cups flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted butter
1 cup milk
1 egg
4 teaspoons baking powder
Sift the dry ingredients together. Beat the eggs, add the milk and stir in the dry ingredients. Then add the melted butter. Turn into muffin tins and bake in a hot oven twenty-five to thirty minutes.

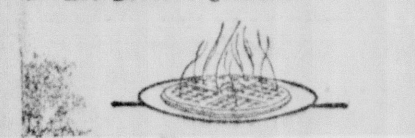

New Pancakes
Pancakes? Of course! Every family likes them, and you ever tried rye pancakes? Delicious. The following recipe is contributed by Miss Lucy G. Allen, principal of the Boston School of Cookery.

Mix one cup each of rye meal and bread flour, one-fourth cup of sugar, two teaspoons of cream of tartar, one teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon of salt and one-half teaspoon of grated nutmeg.
Add one well-beaten egg and one cup of milk. Beat well and drop by spoonfuls into deep fat. Drain on soft paper and serve hot with maple or any good sweet syrup.

Rice Griddle Cakes
Rice griddle cakes have made a name for themselves down south. And there's no reason why folks everywhere should not like them. Miss Rosa Michaels, New Orleans cooking expert, gives her recipe for them.

1 cup boiled rice
1 cup milk
1 cup flour
1 egg
2 teaspoons shortening
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
Mix rice, milk, melted shortening, salt and well-beaten egg. Sift the dry ingredients and add to first mixture. Mix thoroughly and bake on hot greased griddle.

Hot Waffles!
And where can you find a dish more enticing than waffles, served with rich maple syrup, corn syrup, or molasses? The following recipe is also Miss Michaels:

2 1/2 cups flour
2 cups milk
4 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
2 eggs
1 1/2 teaspoons shortening
1 teaspoon salt

Sift dry ingredients; add milk to the yolks of eggs. Beat thoroughly and add to dry ingredients, now the melted shortening and mix in the beaten whites of the eggs. Bake well in hot waffle irons. Some of the modern devices require no grease in the baking. Serve at once.

Many women set the table the night before, and have all cooking utensils needed for breakfast laid out, to save time in the morning. This avoids much needless early morning confusion.

Oil stove users will be glad to know of a wick cleaner which fits over wicks, and removes all char and unevenness at a simple turning. Very inexpensive and saves hands.

Whiter Clothes
Did you know that clothes rinsed in hard water require very little bluing, and are whiter than when rinsed in soft water?

Astronomers Answer Old Problem Of Source Of Energy In Universe

(Editor's Note: In a second article Dr. C. G. Abbot, of Smithsonian Institution, tells of the gigantic temperatures found on the stars, their source of energy and other characteristics of the "citizens of heaven.")

By Robert S. Thornburgh
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 10.—For the first time one of the mysteries of centuries—the source of energy which permits the stars to range in temperature up to 40,000,000 degrees centigrade—has been answered.

Pointing out that surface temperatures of the stars range from 3,000 to 16,000 degrees for such a star as Rigel, and the sun's 6,000 degrees, Dr. C. G. Abbot, of Smithsonian Institution, showed that science has proven interior heat of the stars to reach 40 million degrees.

What is the source of energy which maintains the tremendous outward flow of stellar radiation?

For the first time, according to Dr. Abbot, an adequate answer has been brought forward.

No End to Sun
"Now that atoms are shown to consist entirely of groups of equal electrical charges, positive and negative, supposed to remain separate by virtue of orbital motion, it is conceived that under the circumstances of exalted temperature and pressure prevailing within stars, union of these electric particles may occur, with annihilation of mass and liberation of energy," Dr. Abbot declared.

"If this is so, our sun can continue to maintain the present rate of solar radiation for some fifteen trillion years."

Another achievement of modern astronomy is the determination of the velocities of the stars.

The sun and his planets move about 12 miles per second and other star velocities range from 5 to 100 miles per second, according to Abbot. It appears that the various groups of stars of different spectral types, the star clusters and even the spiral nebulae are moving along a great common highway. The flight is like that of several swarms of bees, which by chance have chosen a common path for their migrations, but in which the individual bees fly about in every direction.

Abbot declared that the free admission of all the rays of the sun and stars, if admitted to the earth's surface, would destroy our sight by chemical action. On the other hand, if the protecting ozone layer in the upper atmosphere cut off just a fraction more of the spectrum of the sun, human and animal young would be stricken by rickets.

Solar Radiation

Touching on solar radiation and the dependence of life thereon, Abbot showed that this dependence rests on a very narrow margin of safety. Certain extreme ultra-violet solar rays synthesize a layer of ozone out of the oxygen in the upper air. This protecting element if brought to sea level would make a layer of ozone gas about as thick as a sheet of cardboard.

Abbot has carried on investigations for 22 years to prove that solar radiation varies. The variation recently has been traced into the extreme ultra-violet rays where it is so great that if our eyes were sensitive to these rays, the sun would appear twice as bright at certain times as at others.

"It already has been proved that the earth's magnetic state marches in close accord with the intensity of solar radiation as measured by the Smithsonian Institution," Abbot continued.

"Reception of long range radio signals also marches hand in hand with the intensity of solar radiation."

"The weather seems to respond to solar changes. The relationship is extremely complex, however, and will take years of investigation to unravel."

Periods of Variation

Abbot described the recent discovery of an apparently definite periodicity of 25 2/3 months in solar variation declaring that "if these definite periods shall persist we shall be in a position to forecast for years in advance the principal solar variations and everything which may be found to depend upon it."

As an indication of the tremendous importance of the study of solar radiation, Abbot pointed out that all plants grow by absorbing solar energy, and using it to promote chemical reactions in a way still imitable by chemists.

Ultra-violet rays produce certain changes of chemical structure in fats and oils which are the source of those traces of hormones so important in the growth and health of animals.

"Also from the purely utilitarian point of view, the study of the sun is important because of the possibilities of the application of solar energy to power production," Dr. Abbot said.

Dining Distinction
that asks little of your Purse!

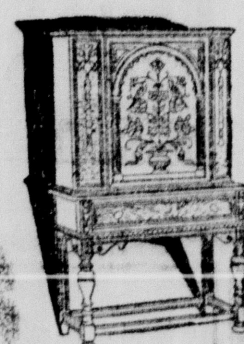

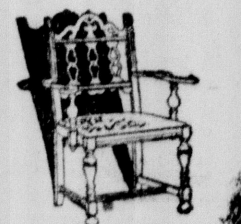

AS the name implies, The Avon is 17th century English in design—a sturdy, honest style with rugged stretchers, bold turnery, hand-carved panels, and a mellowed antique finish. It is smartly modern, too. The comfortable chairs are upholstered in rich velour. The colorful decoration of the china cabinet has been hand-painted in antique Chinese vermilion. The sideboard possesses solid mahogany trays for silver and linens. It is a master suite of master craftsmen—each piece bearing Berkey & Gay's coveted Shop Mark.

The "AVON"

We believe this suite, in authentic style, correct design, careful workmanship, and the rich beauty of woods and finish, is unusual for the price we are asking.

Each chair is careful in comfort, and is a thing of beauty. The velour upholstery, selected for its color and lustrous quality, fits the design.

An accent of color, so requisite to modern homes, is contained in the china cabinet—its door hand-painted in antique Chinese vermilion.

A luxury of carving, expertly hand-cut, gives the sideboard beauty in its own right. It possesses convenience, too—deep linen trays and a partitioned tray for silverware.

solution to the problem and that was consolidation of the rural schools.

After having spoken of the advantages of consolidation, Dr. Driver spoke of the one big thing which many opponents of consolidation place before those who are in favor of consolidation, and that is transportation.

In almost all instances the opponents of consolidation will raise the question: "How will we get our pupils to the schools because of the poor roads?" Dr. Driver reminded his audience of the fact that the roads of the state are continually being improved and that this question no longer can enter the discussion to any great extent.

He told his audience that if they wished to know something about consolidation, they should seek information from some person who has had the experience and is able to tell both sides of the project, and not from the person who knows only one side of the story.

At present Pennsylvania has 475 consolidated schools and of this number 450 have been approved by the state department. This fall there will be but one county in the State that has no consolidated schools. Last year five counties had no consolidation, but during the past year four of them were converted to the idea of consolidation and five new schools were erected.

The speaker also spoke of the cost of operating the consolidated school, saying that in the long run it is less expensive to operate the consolidated school than it is to operate the one-room school.

Another problem to be encountered in consolidation, mentioned by the speaker, was the location of the building. He said in many instances the property owners in the district feel that the school building should be placed in the corner of their field for convenience sake. The speaker dwelt at some length on the regulations for transportation. The cost of transportation throughout the state is about 18 cents per pupil per day.

County Superintendent J. Harry Hoffman spoke briefly on "Our Two and Three Year High Schools." Mr. Hoffman said after this summer it will be impossible for the graduates of the three-year course high schools to enter the normal school because they do not have the required number of units. Ordinarily the three-year course high schools can give the graduates only 12 units and 16 are required to enter the normal schools. During the past few weeks Mr. Hoffman has been holding examinations in his office for graduates of three year high schools who wish to enter the normal schools in the fall.

The speaker urged the directors to make some provision for their graduates so that they will be enabled to enter the normal schools in the fall. Directors were also reminded that no young people graduating from the high schools this spring will be able to go to the summer schools for six weeks this summer and then teach in the fall. He also told the directors they should be sure to see the certificates of their teachers before the term begins and if they do not hold the proper certificates, they will not teach. Often great problems arise during the school term, when it is found that the teacher does not hold a certificate that entitles her to teach.

During the morning session the delegates to the state convention gave interesting reports. Delegates were George G. Gayman, Plumstead township; Rev. Charles B. Weaver, Perkaskie; Jesse E. Harper, Yardley; Mrs. Alice S. Clemens, Doylestown township, and William E. Smith, Upper Makefield. Dr. Carmon Ross, Doylestown, and Mahlon Keller, Perkaskie, reported on new legislation as recently enacted by the State Legislature.

Results of the election were as follows: President, Elmer B. Landenslager, Dublin; first vice-president, Warren Oberholtzer, Richlandtown; second vice-president, Ezra Miller, Newtown; secretary, Mrs. Adeline S. Kelly, Warrington; treasurer, Walter M. Carwithen.

Before adjournment the retiring president, George G. Gayman, called upon the newly elected president and secretary for a few remarks.

Flood Aftermath Challenges Nation Health Forces In Red Cross Campaign

Scenes in the Red Cross health campaign among refugees from the Mississippi Valley flood. Insert shows Dr. William R. Redden, Red Cross Medical Advisor, directing health work in flood zone.

ON a front that extends from Southern Illinois to the Gulf of Mexico, a battle is raging on the outcome of which the health of the whole nation may depend. It is a battle of man against microbes, and the battle-front is the flooded Mississippi river valley.

Dr. William R. Redden, National Medical Officer of the Red Cross, is leading the fight for man, with the cooperation of Federal and State health authorities and resources of the United States behind him. His problem is so to combat the menace of disease in the disaster zone that not only will there be no serious outbreak among the thousands of crowded flood refugees, but that no aftermath of disease will threaten the health structure of the whole country.

Despite the odds against them, the health officers have been successful to date. More than eighty counties of seven states flooded, or slime-coated from receding waters, thousands of dead animals submerged, or in the fields, drink water polluted, mosquito-breeding lakes by the mile—all these and many other factors contribute to one of the gravest health problems in the nation's history. Yet the health conditions in the disaster zone are better than normal, and there have been no epidemics.

A health program was inaugurated in the flood area which demanded safe water, safe milk, universal typhoid inoculation, mosquito control, malaria preventives, disposal of dead animals, garbage and sewage, and ample medical service for the refugees.

Approximately 300,000 persons have been inoculated against typhoid, 125,000 against small pox; already 1,378,188 gallons of quinine have been issued; 78,000 gallons of oil for spraying mosquito-breeding areas; and lime by the carload has been sent in to disinfect carcasses. The munitions in this war are medical and chemical, but their bulk looms like the munitions of a World War battle field.

The forces engaged in the campaign include 31 health officers, 13 sanitary engineers, nine sanitary inspectors, 23 physicians, and 118 nurses, the latter under supervision of Miss Elizabeth G. Fox, Red Cross nursing advisor during the emergency, and her assistant, Miss I. Malinde Havey.
